

Fireworks-Free Friday

With the 4th of July coming up, our tradition of fireworks can be a night of fun for the family. However, fireworks are single-use, and create waste each year, washing up on our shoreline for days and weeks afterward.

This year is a little different, with no official fireworks planned in many towns. But if you're not willing to skip the fireworks altogether, make sure you are disposing of your waste products properly!

This photo shows plastic plugs, which come from different types of fireworks, mostly rockets. Don't leave debris like this behind after your celebration!

Photo Credit: Ellen Anderson